PREFACE

This 1983 edition of State-Approved Schools of Nursing—L.P.N./L.V.N. includes all of the schools that, as of October 15, 1982, conducted programs preparing for licensure as a practical or vocational nurse. The listings of these schools were obtained from the boards of nursing of the states or other legal jurisdictions of the United States. The state boards have indicated those schools which were new, reactivated, or discontinued between October 16, 1981, and October 15, 1982, inclusive. In some instances, the state boards have indicated schools that will discontinue the practical nursing program within the next year. State boards are also supplying more information about programs that lack full state approval. Codes for making these distinctions will be found on page 2, "Key to Abbreviations and Symbols."

The National League for Nursing, Division of Accreditation Services, has supplied the list of programs that have national accreditation. Responses to the annual questionnaire mailed in October 1982, representing a 100 percent return from the schools, provide other information.

An important feature has been introduced this year. For the first time, the telephone number of most schools has been published in this directory. This service will be invaluable to prospective students, guidance counselors, administrators, educators, and others who wish to communicate directly and quickly with schools all over the country.

Programs have been classified as adult education programs, high school programs, and high school extended programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for out-of-school youth or adults and have not been planned as part of a high school curriculum have been classified as adult programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students and lead concurrently to a high school diploma and eligibility for licensure have been classified as high school programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students, lead to a high school diploma, but require some additional months of preparation after high school graduation are classified as high school extended programs. Many programs admit students other than those for whom their curriculum plans were primarily intended. Although programs may differ considerably, all of the graduates are eligible to write the licensing examination for this occupational group.

To conserve space, such phrases as "School of Practical Nursing," "Department of Vocational Nursing," and "Practical Nursing" have been omitted from the names of schools and programs except where they are necessary for identity. Several schools of nursing responded to the questionnaire but did not include permission to publish the information. This lack of permssion to publish is indicated in the listing, but the statistical information is included in the summary table on page .

The summary table follows the school listings and is a useful source of information on the current status of admissions, fall admissions, enrollments, and graduations. A listing of the state boards of nursing is included in the directory. Other tables that were published in previous editions of the directory now appear in the NLN Nursing Data Book of which the most recent edition was just published.

Those who compiled the book and those who use the information are deeply indebted to the many contributors who made the publication possible. For many years all schools of nursing have responded to our requests for information, a phenomenal record by any standard, and we acknowledge this cooperation with gratitude. A special word of thanks is also due to the state boards of nursing who have, without exception, cooperated at every stage.

PREFACE

This 1983 edition of State-Approved Schools of Nursing—L.P.N./L.V.N. includes all of the schools that, as of October 15, 1982, conducted programs preparing for licensure as a practical or vocational nurse. The listings of these schools were obtained from the boards of nursing of the states or other legal jurisdictions of the United States. The state boards have indicated those schools which were new, reactivated, or discontinued between October 16, 1981, and October 15, 1982, inclusive. In some instances, the state boards have indicated schools that will discontinue the practical nursing program within the next year. State boards are also supplying more information about programs that lack full state approval. Codes for making these distinctions will be found on page 2, "Key to Abbreviations and Symbols."

The National League for Nursing, Division of Accreditation Services, has supplied the list of programs that have national accreditation. Responses to the annual questionnaire mailed in October 1982, representing a 100 percent return from the schools, provide other information.

An important feature has been introduced this year. For the first time, the telephone number of most schools has been published in this directory. This service will be invaluable to prospective students, guidance counselors, administrators, educators, and others who wish to communicate directly and quickly with schools all over the country.

Programs have been classified as adult education programs, high school programs, and high school extended programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for out-of-school youth or adults and have not been planned as part of a high school curriculum have been classified as adult programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students and lead concurrently to a high school diploma and eligibility for licensure have been classified as high school programs. Programs that are conducted primarily for high school students, lead to a high school diploma, but require some additional months of preparation after high school graduation are classified as high school extended programs. Many programs admit students other than those for whom their curriculum plans were primarily intended. Although programs may differ considerably, all of the graduates are eligible to write the licensing examination for this occupational group.

To conserve space, such phrases as "School of Practical Nursing," "Department of Vocational Nursing," and "Practical Nursing" have been omitted from the names of schools and programs except where they are necessary for identity. Several schools of nursing responded to the questionnaire but did not include permission to publish the information. This lack of permssion to publish is indicated in the listing, but the statistical information is included in the summary table on page .

The summary table follows the school listings and is a useful source of information on the current status of admissions, fall admissions, enrollments, and graduations. A listing of the state boards of nursing is included in the directory. Other tables that were published in previous editions of the directory now appear in the NLN Nursing Data Book of which the most recent edition was just published.

Those who compiled the book and those who use the information are deeply indebted to the many contributors who made the publication possible. For many years all schools of nursing have responded to our requests for information, a phenomenal record by any standard, and we acknowledge this cooperation with gratitude. A special word of thanks is also due to the state boards of nursing who have, without exception, cooperated at every stage.
